Enclosures: China city licences

Embargo: 07.00 Wednesday 13 July 2005

CITIC Prudential becomes the leading foreign insurance company in China in terms of city licences

Prudential's life insurance joint venture in China, CITIC Prudential Life, has been awarded a further two city licences, taking its total to ten and making it the largest foreign life insurer in the country in terms of licences.

These new licences will enable CITIC Prudential Life to sell its portfolio of products, which include traditional life/term assurance and unit-linked life policies as well as accident and health products in Nanjing and Shenzhen, with a combined population of 12 million.

Mark Norbom, Chief Executive, Prudential Corporation Asia, said today:

"China is an extremely attractive market with compelling demographics. The two new licences we have announced today give CITIC Prudential a significant geographic lead over other foreign insurers in this growth market.

"Our strategy is to continue to expand geographically by acquiring further city licences and to focus on building scale businesses through product innovation and multi-channel distribution backed up by top-quality, cost-efficient servicing."

The Chinese life insurance industry has experienced dramatic rates of growth in recent years with life premiums growing on average by more than 37 per cent between 1980 and 1997. Several factors suggest that the growth will continue:

- Life insurance penetration in China as a percentage of GDP is still only 2.3 per cent.
- Of the GBP21 billion market for Life Gross premiums that was recorded in 2004, foreign insurers accounted for approximately GBP544 million - around 3 per cent of the total.

CITIC Prudential was awarded its first city licence in October 2000. In addition to the ten city licences, CITIC Prudential also has a licence to sell group life insurance in China. In 2004 APE sales for CITIC-Prudential in China increased by 70 per cent on the previous year and the company now employs more than 8,000 staff and agents.
