Item 8.01. Other Events.

On February 27, 2012, Career Education Corporation (the Company or the Registrant) received draft unofficial cohort default rates from the U.S. Department of Education (ED) for students of the Company's institutions who entered repayment during the federal fiscal year ending September 30, 2010 (the 2010 cohort). The weighted average of all institutions was 14.6%, as compared to a weighted average of 16.4% for all of the Company's institutions for students who entered repayment during the federal fiscal year ending September 30, 2009 (the 2009 cohort). None of our institutions exceeded the 25% default threshold.

A table of the draft unofficial 2010 cohort default rates for each of our main and additional (branch) campus locations for regulatory purposes is attached as Exhibit 99.1 and is incorporated herein by reference.

Under the Higher Education Act (the HEA), an institution may lose eligibility to participate in some or all student aid and loan programs under Title IV of the HEA (Title IV Programs) if the rates at which its former students default on the repayment of their federally-guaranteed or federally-funded student loans exceed specified percentages. This is determined by an institution's cohort default rate which is calculated on an annual basis. Each cohort is the group of students who first enter into student loan repayment during a federal fiscal year (ending September 30). The currently applicable cohort default rate for each cohort is the percentage of the students in the cohort who default on their student loans prior to the end of the following federal fiscal year, which represents a two-year measuring period. ED generally publishes draft cohort default rates in February of each year for the repayment period that ended the prior September 30. Draft rates do not result in sanctions and can change between February and the release of the official cohort default rates in September.

Currently, an institution whose cohort default rate equals or exceeds 25% for three consecutive years, or 40% for a single year, will no longer be eligible to participate in Title IV Programs for the remainder of the federal fiscal year in which ED determines that such institution has lost its eligibility and for the two subsequent federal fiscal years. The consequences applicable to two-year cohort default rates will continue to apply through the publishing of the rates for the 2011 cohort, which will be in 2013.

The 2008 Higher Education Opportunity Act (the HEOA) made significant changes to the requirements governing the Title IV Programs, including the provisions on cohort default rates. Under the HEOA, a separate calculation will be performed starting for the 2009 cohort that will add an additional federal fiscal year of borrowers' repayment performance to the applicable cohort year. Starting after rates for the 2011 cohort are finalized in 2014, sanctions will be imposed if an institution has a cohort default rate, under the new calculation, of 30% or more per year for three consecutive federal fiscal years, or more than 40% for a single year.

Although the Company's two-year cohort default rate improved from the 2009 official cohort to the 2010 draft cohort, the Company believes the cohort default rates of its schools have generally been increasing over the past several years due to the challenging economic climate and changes in the manner in which student loans are serviced. The Company has student loan default management initiatives at all of its schools that participate in Title IV Programs aimed at reducing the likelihood of students' failure to repay their loans in a timely manner. These initiatives emphasize the importance of students' compliance with loan repayment requirements and provide for extensive loan counseling and proactive communication with students after they cease enrollment. However, if any of the Company's schools, depending on its size, were to lose eligibility to participate in federal student financial aid programs because of high student loan default rates, it could have a material adverse effect on the Company's business.

For additional information regarding cohort default rates, including the Company's two- and three-year rates for prior periods and the regulatory transition from two-year rates to three-year rates, please refer to Item 1 and Item 1A of the Company's Annual Report on Form 10-K for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2011, which was filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission on February 27, 2012.
