On February 14, 2013, the following communication was made available to Alliance Partners.

Dear _____:

As you may have heard, today is a historic day for us as American has announced plans to combine with US Airways to create a premier global carrier.

Earlier today, my colleague, Kurt Stache, American's Vice President Strategic Alliances, sent the following letter to your colleague, _____, sharing our exciting news. For our customers, there will be anticipation of an expanded global and international network, but at this time, we will remain separate companies. It is important for customers to know that their AAdvantage® miles are secure and existing miles will continue to be honored. Likewise, the elite program and its various facets such as lifetime status, upgrades, and bonus mileage, are intact. In addition, customers can continue to earn miles through existing AAdvantage participating companies and to redeem those miles for the same great awards – flights, upgrades, car rentals and hotels just to name a few.

I want to thank you for your support during this important time for American and I look forward to continuing to work with you to provide our customers with the benefits and choices they value most.

Sincerely,

Suzanne Rubin

President AAdvantage Loyalty Program

Dear [NAME (Airline Business Partner Contact)]:

As a valued airline partner of American Airlines, we want you to be among the first to know the exciting and historic news that American Airlines and US Airways have announced plans to come together to create the new American Airlines.

Over the past few months, we conducted an objective and thorough review of scenarios for the future of American and determined that this combination delivers the most value for our stakeholders and the best outcome for our customers and people. As a combined carrier – the new American – we will have an expanded network to even better match where customers want to fly and a greater ability to invest in our fleet, modern technologies, and the products and services our customers value most.

As we have been working to build the new American, we've been telling you about our progress – including transforming our fleet with the largest aircraft order in history, modernizing the travel experience, improving our revenue performance and refreshing our iconic brand, to name just a few of our important initiatives. We expect that this combination will enable us to further bolster our offerings for customers and allow us to provide the most connected, comfortable travel experience in the industry.

More Access to More Destinations Worldwide

American and US Airways combine two complementary networks, creating easier access to the best destinations throughout the U.S. and around the globe. The new American will provide increased choices and better options for customers. Maintaining all the hubs currently served by both airlines, we will offer more than 6,700 daily flights to 336 destinations in 56 countries.

With continued membership in the oneworld® Alliance, the new American's customers will have access to an even greater range of destinations, airline choices, and mileage earning and redemption opportunities. This combined network will provide even more benefits for our customers as we continue to foster and cultivate our existing relationship with partner airlines.

At this time, American Airlines and US Airways remain separate companies, and you can continue to count on American for excellent service and safe, reliable travel. For now, each airline will maintain its current loyalty programs—our AAdvantage® program and US Airways' Dividend Miles. I want to assure you that our customers' AAdvantage miles are secure, existing miles will continue to be honored, and our customers will continue to earn and redeem miles for travel awards with our eligible airline partners.

We expect the merger process to close, subject to customary approvals and closing conditions, in the third quarter of 2013 and will keep you updated on our progress. I invite you and your teams to visit www.aa.com/arriving to learn more about the arrival of the new American.

I would like to thank you for your support during this important time for American and I look forward to continuing to work with you to provide our customers with the benefits and choices they value most.

Best,

Kurt Stache
