Macaé Merchant Power Plant: Petrobras x El Paso Arbitration Process

(Rio de Janeiro, July 8, 2005). PETRÓLEO BRASILEIRO S/A - PETROBRAS, [Bovespa: PETR3/PETR4, NYSE: PBR/PBRA, Latibex: XPBR/XPBRA], a Brazilian international energy company, announces that as previously disclosed in February 2005, it began arbitration proceedings against its partner El Paso. The purpose is to settle the dispute arising from the economic and financial imbalance with respect to the agreement signed between the parties covering the construction and operation of the Macaé Merchant Thermoelectric Plant.

During the long period of negotiations which preceded the arbitration panel, and since the latter's inception, Petrobras has sought various ways of demonstrating its good faith until a final decision to the dispute is reached. The Company has offered to effect the appropriate deposit with the courts or by other mechanisms relating to payments in dispute to be settled by the arbitration tribunal - against a guarantee that such payments made or deposited would be immediately redeemed together with interest due should a ruling be in Petrobras' favor. Up to the present such offers have not been accepted by El Paso, which continues to claim payment irrespective of a final decision on merit and without any preconditions.

On July 5 2005, the Arbitration Court handed down an interlocutory decision and announced today. The decision requires Petrobras to effect payments to El Paso, dependent on the latter first providing a bank surety issued by a first class banking institution acceptable to the Company. The guarantee would have to make principal value plus interest immediately payable against presentation should the case be ruled in Petrobras' favor.

The values of payments and the respective guarantees currently amount to R$ 227,337,467.07 (two hundred and twenty-seven million, three hundred and thirty-seven thousand four hundred and sixty-seven Reais and seven centavos) and would additionally cover on a month by month basis, the amounts equivalent to the Contingency Payments for future due dates until a final ruling on merit is handed down, currently expected in November 2005.

Petrobras continues to await the delivery of El Paso's guarantees for subsequent due analysis and adoption of necessary procedures.
