Petrobras signs contract with KL Energy for the development of technology for the production of cellulosic ethanol

Rio de Janeiro, August 25th, 2010 Petróleo Brasileiro S.A - Petrobras, through Petrobras America, notifies that it has signed a joint development agreement with KL Energy Corporation (KLEG.PK, "KLE") for the optimization of KLE's technology for the processing of cellulosic ethanol for the utilization of sugar-cane bagasse as a raw material.

As part of the contract, Petrobras will invest US$ 11 million to adapt KLE's demonstration facilities to use bagasse and to validate, through tests, the process for the production of cellulosic ethanol.

In parallel, Petrobras and KLE will develop a cellulosic ethanol plant project on an industrial scale which will be completely integrated to a sugar-cane plant that belongs to the Petrobras Group in Brazil. The plant is scheduled to begin operating in 2013. The contract, whose initial term is of 18 months, provides for the mutual exclusiveness in the area of cellulosic ethanol development using sugar-cane bagasse, and offers Petrobras the option of obtaining a license for the use of KLE's technology in the assets of the Petrobras Group.
