Filed by: Harris Corporation Commission File No. 1-3863 Pursuant to Rule 425 under the Securities Act of 1933 and deemed filed pursuant to Rule 14a-12 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 Subject Company: L3 Technologies, Inc. Commission File No. 1-37975 IMO Icebreaker: Interview with Jim Jordano and Heidi Wood How do you keep two seasoned executives with decades of cutting-edge business transformation experience on their toes? Put them in charge of merger integration for Harris and L3. Meet Jim Jordano and Heidi Wood, the co-leads of the Integration Management Office (IMO) tasked with making two great companies successfully merge into one. Jordano is Vice President, Integration for Harris and Wood is SVP, Corporate Strategy and Technology at L3. The two of them are responsible for overseeing a first-class “team of teams” – more than 25 in total – each led by a representative from Harris and one from L3. “These teams are doing the heavy lifting,” says Jordano, who joined Harris in 2015 and has more than 20 years of experience in defense and technology, fine-tuning business operations and leading integrations that build stronger, high-performance companies. “This integration will only be successful with the dedication of these teams to deliver detailed planning, thorough preparation and open lines of communication to make it happen.” The IMO teams are ensuring that functions like human resources, engineering, business development, supply chain operations and others understand the way their counterparts in the other company work, and are ready to become single, seamless operations when the merger closes in mid-2019. “The way this process is managed is extremely important, and people are watching. There’s no question we’re in a glass fishbowl right now,” says Wood. “This merger of strengths has been a bold move from the start and it’s generating plenty of attention.”

Wood's background in corporate development, strategic planning, and her time on Wall Street as an aerospace industry analyst, brought her to L3 in 2016 in search of teamwork and camaraderie. She believes that excelling in the integration will send a powerful message about the future company. "The greater our success in managing the integration, the stronger our position will be with our customers, shareholders and employees to grow, trust and achieve unprecedented wins with our combined capabilities. It's a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, and people are really stepping up." It's up to Jordano and Wood to provide the leadership that keeps the IMO on track: delivering workplans, communicating and implementing those plans, and exceeding expectations. This means being open and available to the integration teams at all times, answering questions and providing guidance, keeping leadership updated and looking at lots – and lots – of spreadsheets. There's no doubt that this is a learning experience for everyone involved. "I'm continually impressed by what I'm learning about the people and capabilities at Harris, and I'm convinced there's no better match out there in the industry, and certainly no better partner to work with than Jim," says Wood. Jordano agrees. "I've been impressed by the spirit, openness and motivation of the team. It's clear we are building a great culture and there's a lot of excitement and positive energy about what lies ahead for the new company." Forward-Looking Statements Certain of the matters discussed in this communication are forward-looking statements within the meaning of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. All statements other than historical facts may be forward-looking statements; words such as "may," "will," "should," "likely," "projects," "guidance," "expects," "anticipates," "intends," "plans," "believes," "estimates," and similar expressions are used to identify forward-looking s Such statements are made in reliance on the safe harbor provisions of Section 27A of the Securities Act of 1933 and Section 21E of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.
