'59 Minutes With Bob': A Candid Discussion of Merger Issues

A record crowd gathered on Friday, February 4 to spend 59 Minutes With Bob discussing the proposed merger with Exelon. Bob kicked off the meeting with an overview of the business reasons for the merger.

The merger was part of a natural evolution that started with deregulation, Bob told the group. When the utility industry was deregulated, we kept our generation business and moved it into a separate deregulated subsidiary. At the time, we believed we could grow our operations to the scale needed for operational efficiency.

Bob went on to explain some of the factors that impacted our business. "We were operating in a highly competitive commodity marketplace," he said. "Changes in credit markets made it more difficult to grow our business to the scale we needed. At the same time, the high price of natural gas made gas-cycled generation plants uneconomical."

These, and other factors, made it necessary to enter into some form of transaction that would enhance our long-term success. The combination of Exelon and PSEG brings our nuclear fleet to twenty and has the scale advantages needed in this competitive business environment, he explained.

Even though from a purchasing standpoint they are buying us, the transaction has all the elements of a classic merger, he said. There are no winners or losers. It's all about creating value for shareholders.

Bob went on to acknowledge that while the merger made sense from a business perspective, most people are more concerned with what's going to happen to me. He opened up the session to associates' questions about careers, benefits and the impact of the merger on the Services Company. Here are some highlights of this candid Q&A session:

Question: How will the merger affect the Services Company, specifically the various Practice Areas?

Answer: The transition teams are in the process of being formed and it will be their job to determine what the merged company will look like. At this point, we don't know how it will play out in individual Practice Areas. When two companies come together, there are obvious overlaps that have to be rationalized (that is, combined and reduced).

The teams will be looking at the work from the standpoint of volume vs. strategic work. As a rule, the size of the organization needed depends on the volume of the work handled. Other synergies can be found in systems and processes. The transition teams will look at the systems and processes each company employs to develop Best Practices. A lot of work will revolve around IT systems to figure out what we will use in the future.

Question: How will people be selected for positions with the merged company? Will it be zero-based?

Answer: That's an important question. The HR transition team will be working on that process. It will probably be a combination of zero-basing and normal hiring, depending on the position and the qualifications of the available candidates.

Question: How will new employees be treated when it comes to hiring decisions?

Answer: For non-bargaining unit MAST positions, there are no policies concerning seniority. All people will be treated equally, based on their qualifications. The goal is to get the right person for the job no matter what the person's tenure, or whether they work for PSEG or Exelon. The merged company is going to need a lot of talented people. What matters is the work you do—the skills and capabilities you can bring to the combined organization.

Question: Many people have worked here for 20 or 30 years. They thought they had a job for life here. A lot of people aren't prepared to go out and look for a new job. Is anything being done to help people handle this situation?

Answer: Yes, we are very aware of that and are developing programs to address that problem. You will be seeing special training programs and events to help give people the skill sets they need, including resume writing, interview training, and financial planning.

Bob's final words of advice to associates were: Don't lose confidence. You are part of a well-organized industrial operation. You know how to get things done and you are good at what you do. I am confident you will land on your feet.

Bob received high ratings from all the participants at the event. The overwhelming consensus was to hold more frequent sessions. Keep an eye out for the next 59 Minutes With Bob coming soon to a conference room in the General Office.
