[LETTERHEAD OF METROMEDIA INTERNATIONAL GROUP, INC.]

July 26, 2001

The Editor
Barron's
200 Liberty Street
New York, NY 10281

Dear Editor,

I read the article, "What's the Deal," that appeared in the July 23rd edition of BARRON'S and it is unfortunate that the author, Ms. Erin Arvedlund, used factual inaccuracies and left out pertinent information to try and drive home her one-sided point that shareholders in companies controlled by Mr. Kluge rarely have fared well.

Ms. Arvedlund refers to the leveraged buyout of Metromedia Inc. in 1984 as "conjuring up bitter memories." If bitter memories includes paying approximately $40 per share for a stock that was trading at $24.50 prior to the public announcement of the proposed transaction, which represents an astounding 63% premium, I would hate to think of what her worse memories would be. Does she really think that the $40 purchase price was a mere fraction of the company's true value when the EFFICIENT public markets were pricing the stock at $24.50 prior to the public announcement of the deal? Moreover, this transaction was voted on, and approved, by shareholders. And, by the way, the stock's high price was not $560. She forgot to take into account a 900% stock dividend (equivalent to a 10 for 1 stock split). Therefore, the stock's high price was $56, not $560. This was a major factual error in the article.

It's unfortunate that Ms. Arvedlund needed to refer to a 17 year old transaction to conjure up thoughts of what could occur in the case of Metromedia International, especially when she painted a thoroughly inaccurate picture of this transaction.

As for the for the often-repeated rumor that Mr. Kluge and I will take Metromedia International private, I can categorically and unequivocally state that Mr. Kluge and I have no intention whatsoever of doing so. The management at Metromedia International firmly stands by its past statements, and its work, to increase shareholder value and continues diligently in its efforts to accomplish that goal.

Sincerely,

/s/ Stuart Subotnick
