Tom Horton, Doug Parker Testify on Benefits of Proposed Merger

Yesterday, Tom Horton and Doug Parker testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee in a hearing on how a potential American-US Airways merger will positively affect industry competition and consumers, and why it represents a beneficial outcome for the customers, people and financial stakeholders of both airlines. The hearing, hosted by the Subcommittee on Antitrust, Competition Policy and Consumer Rights, is characteristic of the merger process for large companies, and both airlines are committed to working with the Justice Department to effectively demonstrate the competitive benefits of the proposed merger. Yesterday's hearing represents continued progress in our path toward receiving merger approval.

American Selects Airbus Runway Overrun Prevention System for its A320 Family Fleet

American has decided to equip all of its A320 Family fleet with Airbus' innovative Runway Overrun Prevention System (ROPS) technology. This onboard cockpit technology, which Airbus has pioneered independently over several years, increases pilots' situational awareness during landing, reduces exposure to runway excursion risk, and if necessary, provides active protection. ROPS was first approved by the European Aviation Safety Agency (EASA) on the A380 in October 2009 and to date is currently in service or ordered on around 70 percent of the A380 fleet. ROPS is part of the A350 XWB's basic configuration and is also being applied on the other Airbus types being produced today, starting with the A320 Family, with certification on this type expected later this year. American Tightens its Grip on Latin America

Already by far the strongest airline in Latin America, American is getting stronger. Two events will help American consolidate its grip on the region. TAM, Brazil's biggest carrier, said on March 7 that it would join the oneworld alliance, already the biggest alliance in South America. Earlier, American said it planned to merge with US Airways, strengthening its ability to feed its Latin American routes. American's Miami hub today offers 328 daily departures, and serves 21 destinations in South America, 28 in the Caribbean, 12 in Central America and Mexico, four in Europe, two in Canada and 48 in the U.S. (some are seasonal). Systemwide during the peak summer season, including flights from DFW and other hubs, American offers 2,191 weekly flights to 82 Latin American destinations. American grew Latin American capacity by 4.5 percent in 2012, adding service including Miami to Asuncion, Manaus and Roatan, a

Honduran island. This year the carrier plans to add routes from Miami to Curitiba and Porto Alegre in Brazil. In anticipation of a U.S.-Brazil Open Skies treaty agreement that will be fully in place in 2015, each country is adding four daily flights per year until then. This year, Sao Paolo route authorities are available, and American wants Los Angeles in 2013 and Chicago in 2014.

United's New Premium Cabin to Include Flat-Bed Seats

United has launched its first aircraft equipped with flat-bed seats as part of a newly revamped premium cabin service. United will offer its new service on all nonstop flights between New York JFK and LAX, with 40 flights each way per week, and between JFK and San Francisco, with 46 flights each way per week. Also included in the revamped p.s. service are all-new interiors, personal on-demand entertainment, Wi-Fi connectivity, in-seat power and USB ports. The interior offers 28 flat-bed cabin seats, replacing the 12 angled lie-flat and 26 reclining seats in the premium cabins on the traditional p.s. fleet. The new configuration also features 48 extra-legroom Economy Plus seats and 66 seats in United Economy. United said it plans to launch more reconfigured aircraft into service in June. Until then, most flights on these routes will offer the traditional p.s. service, which United launched in 2004. United plans to reconfigure the entire p.s. fleet by the end of the year. Until the project is complete, the airline will operate these flights with a mix of aircraft.

Editor's Note: On our Airbus A321T transcontinental aircraft, which we expect to begin taking delivery of later this year, we will offer three-class service and fully lie-flat First and Business Class seats.

Ryanair Lifts Boeing with $16 Billion 737 Order

Budget Irish airline Ryanair handed Boeing its largest European order ever on Tuesday, a deal for 175 jets worth $16 billion at list prices that boosts the planemaker's fortunes and strengthens the Irish carrier's domination of Europe's low-cost market. The order for current-generation Boeing 737-800s will increase Ryanair's fleet to 400 planes from 300 at present, as old planes are retired, allowing the carrier to increase passenger numbers by 25 percent over the next five years as rivals plan capacity cuts. The deal, which must be confirmed and then approved by Ryanair shareholders, is a welcome lift to the U.S. company after Indonesia's Lion Air on Monday picked European rival Airbus in a $24 billion firm mega-order. Lion Air had been an exclusively Boeing customer for jets.
